Goldmann Warns U.S. Zionists Committee To Debate Controlled Join In Or Religion In Israel Stand Back

Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Jewish Congress, sternly warned the American Jewish Committee against failing to participate in joint action with other Jewish communities and against setting itself up as a protector "of other weaker Jewish communities," writes Henry Kamm, from Strasbourg, France, to the New York Times. In a keynote speech at the opening session of the World Executive of the Congress, Dr. Goldmann accused the Committee of insisting "on acting on its own."

He charged that the Committee acted "as if it were an international Jewish organization." It does so, he added, without being asked by the Jewish communities in other countries to take a hand in their affairs, and without being guided by their advice.

Dr. Goldmann's anger was believed to have been inspired by the Committee's action last year in sending a mission headed by its president, Morris B. Abram, to Argentina and other South American countries. The mission followed reports of increased activity by extreme right-wing, anti-Semitic organizations.

Dr. Goldmann made his unusually blunt criticism before more than one hundred delegates from thirty countries.

Three Jewish religious leaders, representing branches of Judaism, voiced criticism of Orthodox hegemony in Israel that ranged from mild reproach to a demand for the "complete separation of church and state" in that country, says Irving Spiegel in the New York Times. At the same time, a strong defense of Orthodoxy was made by Dr. Samuel K. Mirsky, professor of rabbinics at Yeshiva University, who is prominently identified with Orthodox Judaism.

The sharp difference of opinion on the subject of religion in Israel came at an Oneg Shabbat (Joy of the Sabbath) session of the 68th annual convention of the Zionist Organization of America at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in New York. The Oneg Shabbat traditionally follows a formal religious service and is devoted to discussion of Jewish spiritual and cultural themes.

Opposing Professor Mirsky's viewpoint were Prof. Mordecai Kaplan, founder of the Reconstructionist Movement and a member of the faculty of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, a major institution of Conservative Judaism; the Rev. Dr. Judah Nadich, of the Park Avenue Synagogue, Conservative; and the Rev. Dr. Louis I. Newman, of Temple Rodeph Shalom, Reform.

Dr. Mirsky, an authority on the Talmud, asserted that the enactment of the law of rabbinic jurisdiction in marriage and divorce by the Knesset, Israel's Parliament, in 1953 was for the

First German Envoy To Israel And First Israeli Envoy To Germany Have Their Work Cut Out For Them

Throughout the Israeli campaign of protest that preceded his formal appointment as West German Ambassador in Tel Aviv, Dr. Rolf Pauls himself never felt inclined to recoil from the challenge, says the London Times. Partly from a sense of loyalty towards the Government and a habit of obedience, which he owes to his officer background, and partly from a conviction that someone had to come to grips with the task — that it was one eminently worth while and that he could do it — he did not hesitate a minute.

The German Foreign Ministry could hardly have chosen a more suitable man, unless one believes that the first German Ambassador to Israel should be a junior diplomatist who had not seen war service because of his youth. The aim in choosing an Ambassador was not only to put relations between Governments on a normal footing, but, as Dr. Pauls himself understands it, to convince Germans and Jews that they not only have a horrendous past in common but also share a bright future.

This meant avoiding a personality who was so overwhelmed by the moral debt of his country towards Israel that he would have bent over backwards to repay it or one who, after the traditional pan-Arab leanings of a part of old Wilhelmstrasse, had little sympathy for the new state of Israel.

Dr. Pauls avoids falling into either extreme. This man of a youthful 49, spry, slight of build, but obviously with great inner reserves of strength, approaches his delicate task with a sense of balance and without attempting to make light of it. He has no obsessions about the past, and is frankly fascinated by the miracle of the modern Jewish state.

This outlook reflects his whole manner, which is courteous, but direct, engaging, and, unlike so many of his countrymen in Government service, mercifully uncomplicated, says the London Times. Here again a soldier's training of looking straight to the heart of a problem undoubtedly helps.

He was born of East Prussian stock, but at Eckartsberga, in the Prussian province of Saxony, on August 26, 1915. His father was an Evangelical pastor, with the broad outlook of north Germany deeply impressed upon his personality. The forebears were mostly lawyers and teachers, but not military men.

Dr. Pauls explains his opting for a military career in 1934 partly by the circumstances of the time, partly by a tradition of service and an attraction for its pedagogical and sporting aspects. His war service was spent partly with an infantry regiment, partly on the staff, and he left the Army in 1945, having lost one arm and with the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross and the rank of major.

His second career began in 1948, when, in the embryonic stages of the Federal Government he joined the staff of Herr Herbert Blankenkorn, then secretary-general to Dr. Adenauer, as chairman of the Parliamentary Council. The next year he followed Herr Blankenkorn to the Liaison Office to the Allied High Commission, which later became the Foreign Ministry. A spell of duty in Luxembourg preceded two and a half years as private secretary to Professor Hallstein, the State Secretary in the Foreign Ministry.

It was the time of the reparations agreement with Israel, and Dr. Pauls then laid the basis of a firm friendship with Dr. Schintar, the head of the Israel mission in Cologne. Then came a tour of duty as counsellor in Washington, which brought more personal friendships and contacts with the Israeli Embassy; a couple of years in Athens; and his present post of head of the Department for Trade and Development aid policy.

It took him to Tel Aviv last April as a member of the German delegation which worked out the establishment of formal relations and made him the first German professional diplomatist to have conducted negotiations in Israel.

A former enthusiastic horseman, Dr. Pauls has retained a fondness for sport; even more than swimming and tennis, he finds walking gives him increasing pleasure. He collects modern paintings and old engravings, and records of concerts by famous soloists.

History has also been a hobby all his life. In 1950 he took a degree in law at Hamburg. In the task of establishing a new Embassy from scratch in Tel Aviv,

As Compassionate Planner Of Great Post-War Rescue, Aide Helped Hundreds Of Thousands To Permanent Havens

Moses Aaron Leavitt, a prominent official for more than 26 years in organized relief for distressed Jews in Europe and other countries, died in the University Hospital, in Geneva, Switzerland, as the result of a stroke. He was 70 years old. His only daughter, Mrs. James Zucker, of Great Neck, L.I., was at his bedside.

Mr. Leavitt was stricken on May 31 in Geneva, where he was attending meetings of several Jewish international agencies, says the New York Times. The day before he had attended a session of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany, of which he was treasurer.

He had been elected treasurer of the Memorial Foundation for Jewish Culture at the initial conference of the foundation in Geneva the day before he was stricken. For a quarter century Mr. Leavitt was a key figure in the Joint Distribution Committee, the major American Jewish agency aiding distressed Jews abroad. He was for a time secretary, and since 1947 had been executive vice chairman of the Committee. His headquarters were in New York.

The first of the statements mourning his death came from Edward Warburg, of New York, chairman of the JDC, who said:

"There are thousands of men and women all over the world who are alive today because of his efforts; his dedication and his skills helped to save and shape the lives of hundreds of thousands."

For more than 26 years he guided the programs of the JDC on behalf of needy and hounded Jews overseas. As executive vice-president during the Nazi era and World War II, he devoted himself to rescuing those who could be saved, and devising methods for helping even those trapped inside Nazi-held Europe.

"After V-E Day, he threw himself into immediate large-scale assistance to the concentration camp survivors and the DP's. After the establishment of the State of Israel in 1948, he initiated programs which eventually brought hundreds of thousands to safety in Israel."

In the early days of the claims conference, it was recalled last year, one of the German negotia-

he will be immensely helped by his wife, says the London Times, whose charm and vivacity will smooth over many difficulties.

Confirmation by the Israeli Cabinet of the choice of Ascher Ben-Nathan, the State Secretary in the Defence Ministry, as the Israeli candidate for the post of ambassador to Bonn is considered of having had to accept candidates against whom each has strong misgivings.

The Israel press campaign against Dr. Pauls, which broke out weeks before his name was ever mentioned officially, and bore every sign, in the German view, of Arab suspicions.

It is certain to be viewed in Cairo as confirmation that the secret negotiations on the resumption of arms deliveries by the Federal Republic will stand high on the new ambassador's list, says the London Times. Both Governments are now in the regrettable position of having had to accept candidates against whom each has strong misgivings.

tors objected that "there is no law which calls for the payment of restitution." Mr. Leavitt snapped back, says the New York Times: "And there was no law which called for the extermination of six million Jews."

Dr. Emanuel Neumann, chairman of the Jewish Agency-American Section, Inc., summed up Mr. Leavitt's work in these terms:

"He played a major role in the rescue, resettlement, and rehabilitation of the victims of the Nazi holocaust and was one of the chief spokesmen and negotiators for the delegation to the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany, which succeeded in arranging for compensation for victims of Nazism that was so helpful in the rebuilding of their lives in Israel and other countries."

The American Jewish Committee, in a tribute, said:

"His contributions to the work of rescue are unparalleled." Dr. William A. Wexler, international president of B'nai B'rith, added: "His compassion for those victims of Nazism was only overshadowed by his determination to secure for them a meaningful measure of restitution."

The United Jewish Appeal described Mr. Leavitt:

"The master planner of the great postwar rescue and immigration operation that brought hundreds of thousands of displaced and homeless Jews out of Europe and North Africa to permanent havens in Israel, the United States, and other free countries."

Mr. Leavitt, who was born in New York City, on August 6, 1894, was graduated from Cornell University with the B.S. degree in 1916. In 1957 he received an honorary doctorate from his alma mater. For a decade after his graduation from college he was a chemical engineer with companies at Lodi and Kenilworth, N.J.

From 1923 to 1929 he was a supervisor with the Jewish Social Service Association, and from 1929 to 1933 he was assistant secretary of the Joint Distribution Committee, says the New York Times. Besides his services with the Committee during and after World War II he was an adviser to the United States War Refugee Board (1944-45); a member of President Eisenhower's Committee for Hungarian Refugee Relief (1956); and a board member of the United States Committee for Refugees since 1959.

Since 1958 he had been honorary chairman of the American Council for Voluntary Agencies. He was also a member of the board of governors of the Hebrew University at Jerusalem, since 1959; head of a Jewish delegation to the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany, during which negotiations were conducted with the West Germans in 1952; and a director of the Jewish Restitution Successor Organization and other Jewish agencies.

His home was at 78 Old Pond Road, Great Neck, Long Island, N.Y.; and his office was at 3 East 54th Street, New York.

The Joint committee observed its 50th anniversary last November with the announcement that it had spent $810 million to aid more than four million Jews in seventy-six countries. Through its efforts 80,000 Jews emigrated from Germany between 1933 and 1939.

Mr. Leavitt is survived by his daughter, Mrs. James Zucker, of Great Neck, who was with him in Geneva; three brothers; three sisters; and four grandchildren, says the New York Times. After a service in the Chapel of the Jewish Cemetery at Verrier, a Geneva suburb, Mr. Leavitt's body was flown to New York for burial.

ON ARABS, SOVIET JEWRY, ISRAEL

language in daily or official life; their rights of association; the right to establish autonomous educational institutions; to develop traditions; and to receive equal treatment in a country's economic pattern.

The principal Soviet delegate at the conference was D. R. Rasukov, the First Secretary of the Communist Party of Tadzhikistan, and I. I. Yakovlev, of the Legal Department of the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

Mr. Torczyner pointed out that the novel recognition by the Soviet government of the right of ethnic, religious or national groups to associate with organizations and individuals in other countries "presents a specific challenge in relation to Soviet Jewry", which the speaker stated is not accorded as guaranteed under the Soviet Constitution, the same rights as other national minorities in the Soviet Union. He pointed to a declaration made in June in London by Ivan Mikhailevich Rostov, the First Secretary to the Soviet Embassy to the Court of St. James's, in addressing a Jewish audience, who denied the existence of any racial prejudice or anti-Jewish prejudice in the Soviet Union.

Mr. Torczyner emphasized that while the evidence of cultural discrimination against the Jewish community in Soviet Russia was incontrovertible, the Soviet government now has the unique opportunity of demonstrating that earnest steps are being taken to remove all such discrimination.

Dr. Judah J. Shapiro, Secretary of the National Foundation for Jewish Culture and author of many works on the American Jewish community, urged the restoration to the Jews of America of the right to vote. He explained that while Jews have full voting rights in the general society, they have become disenfranchised in the Jewish community. It is now for the Jew to vote on Jewish affairs, and they are governed by the few in a most un-American way, he charged.

"If parties were developed in American Jewish community affairs today, the people might have the right to vote and choose between support for Jewish hospitals and medical schools, as against strengthening programs of Jewish education and culture. A public role of the ZOA, which was so effective in the creation of the Jewish State, ought now to be directed to the establishment of democracy in American Jewish life."

In his address on Israel's security and economic problems Joseph Sapir emphasized that the danger to Israel's security are extremely grave. He voiced the view that Egypt's dictator Nasser, who hopes to place himself at the head of the entire Arab camp, regards Israel as an obstacle in his way to conquer Jordan, Syria, and Lebanon. Yet that same Egypt receives arms from the East and large-scale financial aid from the West. "The arms race in the Middle East is one of the major obstacles to any rise in the standard of living of the masses in the Arab countries and a heavy burden on Israel's economy."

Mr. Sapir said: "The future of the Israeli national economy, and that virtually means the future of the State, depends on our ability to turn our economy rapidly into one whose production is forty per cent earmarked for export. To achieve this target, production for the local market must also be cheap. The fact that the European Common Market is increasingly closing up behind protective barriers puts added emphasis on the need for Israel to achieve competitive standards of production."

"Israel needs pioneers from the advanced countries, not in order to milk cows, that can be done by machines, but professionals, managerial personnel, persons with experience in business."

Alluding to the recent developments in the ruling party of Mapai (Labour-Socialists) and its alignment with the most leftist Achiut Haavoda, Mr. Sapir said: "The general trend in Israel during recent years has been toward greater economic and social liberalization, but the alignment between Mapai and Achiut Haavoda is one of the socialism of the nineteenth century, whose day is past."

Referring to the split in Mapai as a result of the decision by Ben-Curion to run a separate slate in the forthcoming elections, the Liberal Party leader declared that "the split in Mapai could create a new political party pattern in Israel, almost a complete reshuffle of the set-up which for thirty years has been the foundation of the ruling institutions of Zionism in the State."

FIRST GERMAN ENVOY TO ISRAEL

of having been condoned if not actually encouraged by the Israeli Government, convinced Bonn that retreat was impossible.

It became a matter of face that Dr. Paul's appointment should be accepted even if it meant accepting Mr. Ben-Nathan.
The first German ambassador to Israel faces a sufficiently delicate task by the very nature of the monstrous memories both countries have in common without being personally the object of heated debate. Whatever the pros and cons of selecting someone who served as an officer in the Wehrmacht, this is certain to be brought up against him at every turn by the more extreme anti-German elements in Israel.
It will be used to condemn the somewhat unyielding attitude he may have to adopt towards Israeli demands when negotiations begin on the economic aid Germany has pledged herself to give.
The coincidence with these protracted birth pangs in the establishment of diplomatic relations of a recrudescence of anti-Semitism in different parts of West Germany, may be merely fortuitous, says the London Times. The Bamberg outrages have been repeated, and there have been anti-semitisms in the Bonn area.

U.S. ZIONISTS DEBATE CONTROLLED RELIGION IN ISRAEL

main purpose of "preserving the unity and continuity of Israel as a united people."

He said that Israel's population, which embraces religious and non-religious Jews, "is not ready for imported trends of Jewish religion made in America."

Leaders of Conservative and Reform Judaism in the United States have frequently criticized the Chief Rabbinate's office in Israel for what they consider Orthodox domination in all matters affecting marriage and divorce.

Calling the problem of religion in Israel "paradoxical," Professor Kaplan said the Israeli Government's treatment of various religious denominations "is almost impeccable." He called attention to the free movement and practice of Moslems and Christian denominations as well as other non-Jewish religious elements.

However, Dr. Kaplan asserted that "the only ones who are authorized to distinguish between authentic and inauthentic Jews are those Orthodox rabbis whom the Government of Israel authorizes to function as rabbis."

Dr. Newman described the religious situation in Israel as "intolerable and as working incalculable hardship on the great numbers of Israeli citizens and Jews of the Diaspora (lands outside Israel) waiting for a separation of church and state, he said civil marriage "should be legalized in Israel and divorce under civil law should also be sanctioned."

Dr. Newman asserted that Reform and Conservatism Judaism "have proved that they can rescue many Jews from indifference and assimilation in the Diaspora" and they were in a position to perform a similar function in Israel.

Rabbi Nadich held that "where religion is compelled, it is not religion... if it is religion, it cannot be compelled." "Neither belief nor practice can be a matter to be decreed by either a Chief Rabbi, a Cabinet, or a Knesset," he declared.

"When a monopoly on religious expression in any state is granted to one interpretation of the religion, it is unwholesome also for both the religion and the society," Rabbi Nadich said.

GOLDMANN WARNS COMMITTEE TO JOIN IN OR STAND BACK

plained that "in recent years certain American Jewish bodies have developed the habit of sending delegations to South America, which are highly publicized but unauthorized by the local representative bodies," says the New York Times. The report described this kind of action as "the development of a kind of American Jewish colonialism."

The American Jewish Committee was founded in 1906 as a reaction to pogroms in Russia. It has 33,000 members in 91 chapters throughout the United States and espouses human rights causes not limited to Jewish affairs.

The American Jewish Committee has cooperated with other Jewish organizations in pursuing specific limited objectives, but has refrained from becoming part of any organization that purports to speak for American Jews generally.

The organization that Dr. Goldmann appeared to have especially in mind was the Presidents' Conference, founded about a decade ago by the leaders of twenty-one American Jewish organizations for common action on Israel. In recent years the organization has concerned itself with broad international questions.

Dr. Goldmann is believed to feel that the Presidents' Conference could become the single body representing the Jews of the United States. Such bodies exist in most other countries and are affiliated with the World Jewish Congress.

Dr. Goldmann noted that representatives of the Presidents' Conference were for the first time attending the current session, says the New York Times. He said the American Jewish Committee was "the one exception" — an American Jewish organization not a member of the Presidents' Conference.

Z.O.A. Convention Hears Discussion On Arabs, Soviet Jewry, Israel, And The Proposed Merger Of Zionist Movement And World Jewish Congress

At the recent Convention of the Zionist Organization of America, in New York, Joseph Saphir, Member of Knesset (Israel Parliament) and Chairman of the Liberal Party of Israel, stressed "with the utmost emphasis that any attempt to bring about talks with our neighbors (Arab states) on the basis of any territorial concessions on our part or through the settlement of Arab refugees in Israel, will be formally rejected by the vast majority of the Israeli people." He further emphasized that "such claims made by the Arabs have no basis whatsoever as far as the needs of the nations surrounding us or the welfare of the refugees themselves are concerned." Mr. Saphir heads the joint Liberal-Herut slate of candidates, in opposition to the dominant Mapai Party, in the elections to the Knesset which will be held in November this year. Addressing delegates to the 68th annual convention of the Zionist Organization of America (ZOA) at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in New York, Mr. Saphir said: "If the Arab refugees were repatriated to Israel, they would form a lumpen-proletariat which would seriously menace Israel's security and stability. Nor is there any justification to the Arab's attempt to deprive Israel of its rights to that proportion of the waters of the Jordan River and Lake Kinneret which are vital and essential to our very existence and which are allocated to Israel under the (Eric) Johnson Plan, named after its American author.

"But to our regret, we have come to learn over and over again that even at times of a relative calm and temporary stability in the regimes of the surrounding Arab States, and most certainly during the repeated occasions when that stability is undermined, there is hardly any abatement in the incitement against Israel, either in those states themselves or throughout the world. In many countries this incitement has assumed all the worst characteristics of an outright anti-Semitic campaign," he charged.

A discussion of problems facing Israel and world Jewry had as speakers: Dr. Emanuel Neumann, Chairman of the American Section of the Jewish Agency Executive, and President of the World Union of General Zionists; Dr. Judah J. Shapiro, educator and historian; and Jacques Torczyner, Chairman of the ZOA National Executive Council, who presided.

Dr. Emanuel Neumann warned "against the illusion that Col. Nasser has turned 'moderate' in view of his recent remarks at the Arab Summit Conference in Cairo. If Nasser's speech was pitched in a minor key, it was due not to a change of heart but to a change of circumstances which precluded an early attack on Israel." He cited Nasser as being "mired in Yemen with 40,000 troops; Egypt's economic and financial plight as desperate; he is at loggerheads with Syria; his trusted friend, Ben Bella, has been overthrown and, above all, Israel's deterrent power cools his heated brows."

Dr. Neumann said: "If some of our policy makers in Washington are still inclined to support Nasser as the 'wave of the future', they may find him to be a backwash of the past. Nothing short of an all-out American and Soviet aid can save him from the end which history reserves for ambitious dictators and reckless military adventurers."

Speaking on the problem of Soviet Jewry, Dr. Neumann referred to Dr. Nahum Goldmann's recent remarks on the protests of American Jews against the Soviet Government for its treatment of Soviet Jewry. Dr. Neumann voiced the belief that: "There can be no disagreement among us on two important points, which are not unrelated. The first is that our criticism of Soviet policy, sharp and firm as it may be, should be responsible criticism both in content and form, based upon the actually known situation and avoiding any exaggeration not substantiated by fact. The second point is the importance and necessity of keeping this issue completely apart from and outside of the Cold War."

"Our purpose is not to stoke the fires of the Cold War by stimulating hostility towards the Soviet Union but to induce it to recognize Soviet Jewry as a religious and ethnic community entitled to all the rights granted to other ethnic and national groups within the Soviet Union."

Dwelling on the world Zionist and Jewish scenes, Dr. Neumann favored the merger of the Zionist Movement and the World Jewish Congress. He urged that a joint committee be constituted by these two world bodies, to initiate exploratory studies of the possibility and a basis for a united framework.

Dealing with the recent paper submitted to the Rabbinical Assembly by a committee of five Conservative rabbis criticizing the structure of the World Zionist Organization, Dr. Neumann pointed out that this report has not been approved, much less adopted, by the Rabbinical Assembly. He said that if they criticize the Zionist Movement or its structure, they do so as friends, not as adversaries. He added that indeed a special commission to study structural revision has already been set up, following a decision at the last Zionist Congress.

Jacques Torczyner of New York, the new president, and Chairman of the National ZOA Executive Council, called upon the Soviet government to permit the visit to the Soviet Union of an American Jewish Goodwill Mission, composed of representatives of all sections of American Jewish life, Zionist and non-Zionist alike, to meet with leaders of Soviet Jewry for a non-political exchange of views.

He made the suggestion following the reported thaw in the Soviet attitude towards a comprehensive definition of human rights which developed at a U.N. Seminar in Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, when the Soviet delegation, as reported by the U.S. delegate Daniel P. Moynihan, accepted a declaration that individuals have a right to associate with organizations and individuals in other countries. This is the first time that Soviet officials have acknowledged such a right.

The U. N. seminar discussed the rights of ethnic, religious, linguistic or national groups to use their own

Eastern's jet "Commuter Service" to New York:

Leaves at 7:55 a.m.

Eastern has 5 flights a day from Montreal to New York—all by jet. But the one at 7:55 a.m. was planned especially for business men. Because it's a jet, you'll spend less time up in the air, more time in New York doing business. We scheduled this flight at 7:55 so you'll get there for a full working day (you'll also miss the rush hour in both cities). At Dorval, arrangements have been made to avoid line-ups—for example, there's an express check-in counter if you only have a briefcase. En route, you'll enjoy a hot breakfast before arriving at Eastern's modern terminal with shops, dining rooms, a Falcon Lounge and plenty of taxis at the door.

Returns at 6:30 p.m. or 8:55 p.m.

There are 2 flights home—both by jet. The first leaves New York at 6:30, giving you a full day in the city and still getting you home before the kids are in bed. A full dinner is served in both classes (that makes both breakfast and supper on us) and liquor service is provided in both classes. If you get tied up at the office or decide to have dinner in town, a second flight leaves at 8:55, arriving at 10:05 p.m. Liquor service, coffee or tea are available on this flight, too. Add it all up—convenient schedules; jet service both ways; 2 meals; liquor service; modern terminals; friendly, courteous attention—your future business trips are going to be a real pleasure. We call it the "Business Man's Special." You'll call it great.
